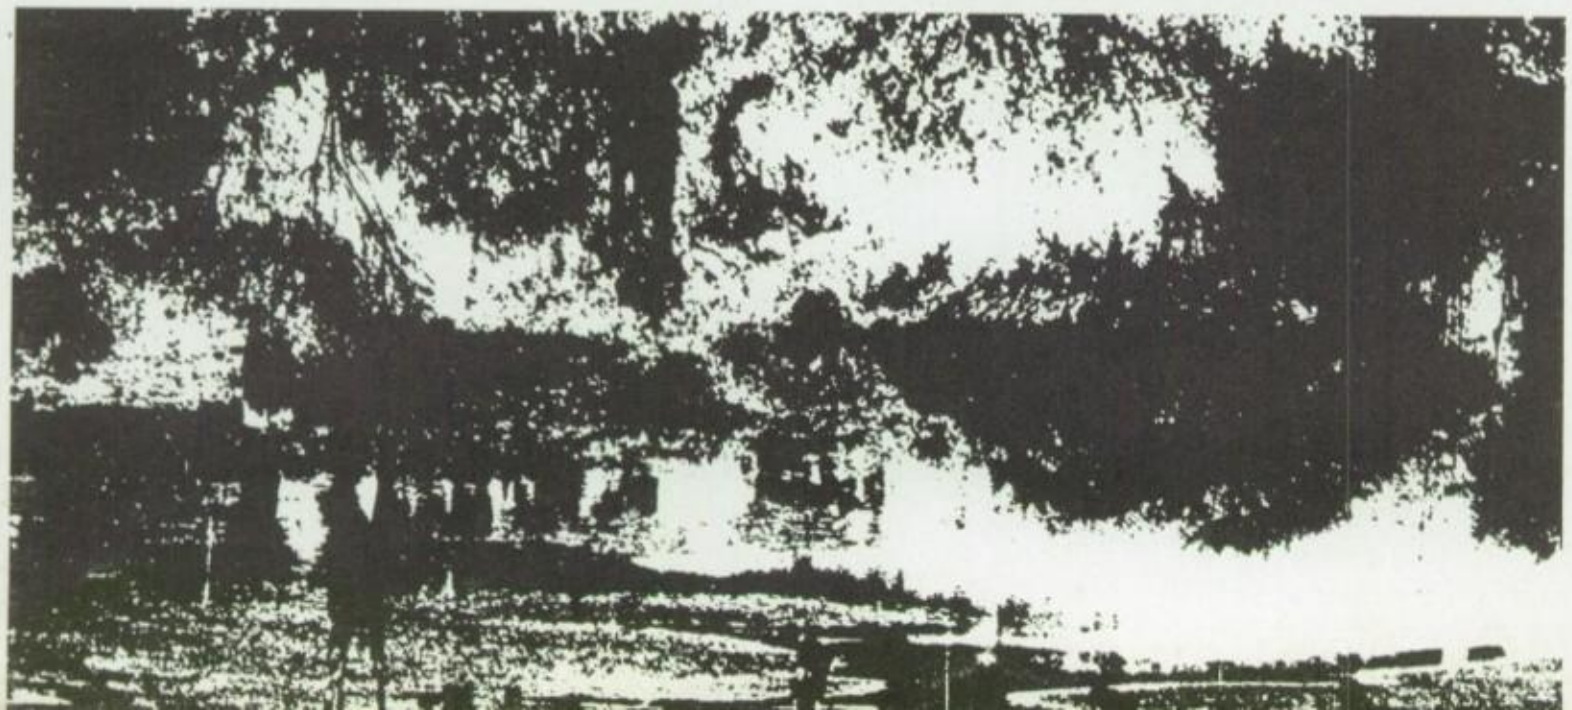
Volume VII

Prologue

It was to be a year of triumph and defeat, of friendships and enmities, of democracy and Father Larroque, of joy and sadness, of power and impotence, of involvement and apathy, of hope and despair. There were to be shared feelings and a sense of unity at times, but inevitably each was to go his own separate way.

For some it was to be another year of sameness, and drudgery, and bitterness. For others it was to be a year of change, and excitement, and sweet memories.

Changes . . . Reflections . . . Sweet and Bitter memories . . . Where would it all end? It would never end, for the essence of life and learning is that they will never end. Changes would continue to be changed. Reflections would still be reflected. Sweet and bitter memories would still be locked up and treasured.



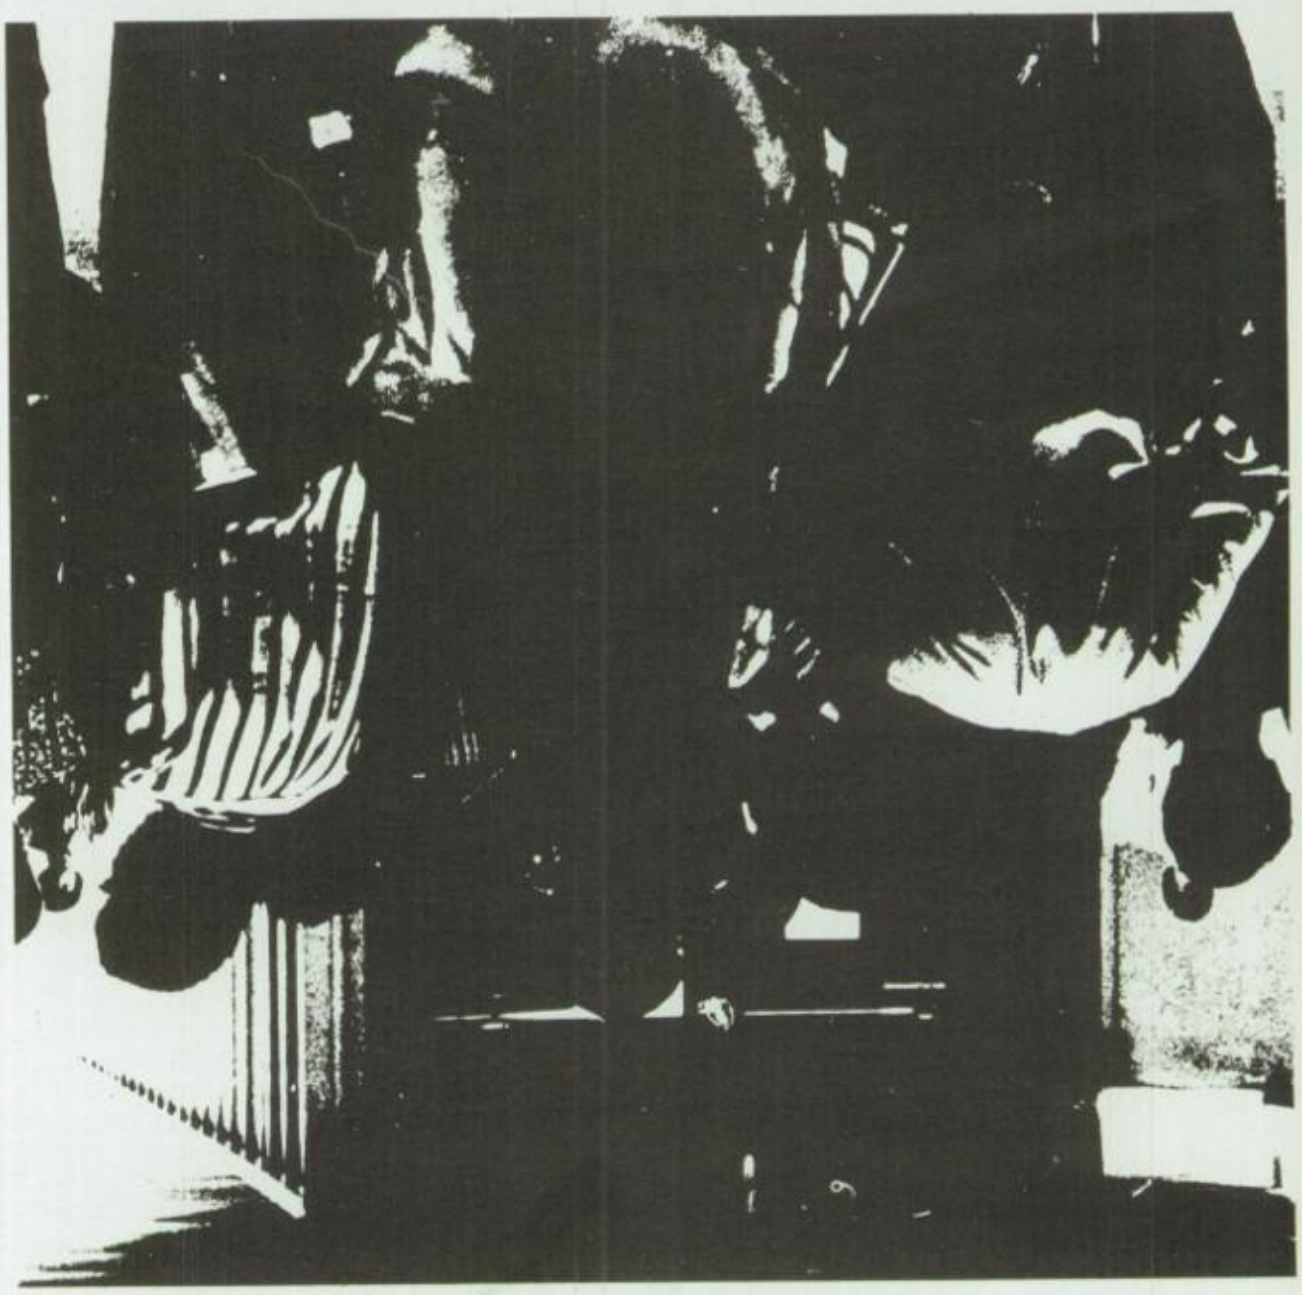
Setting is prepared

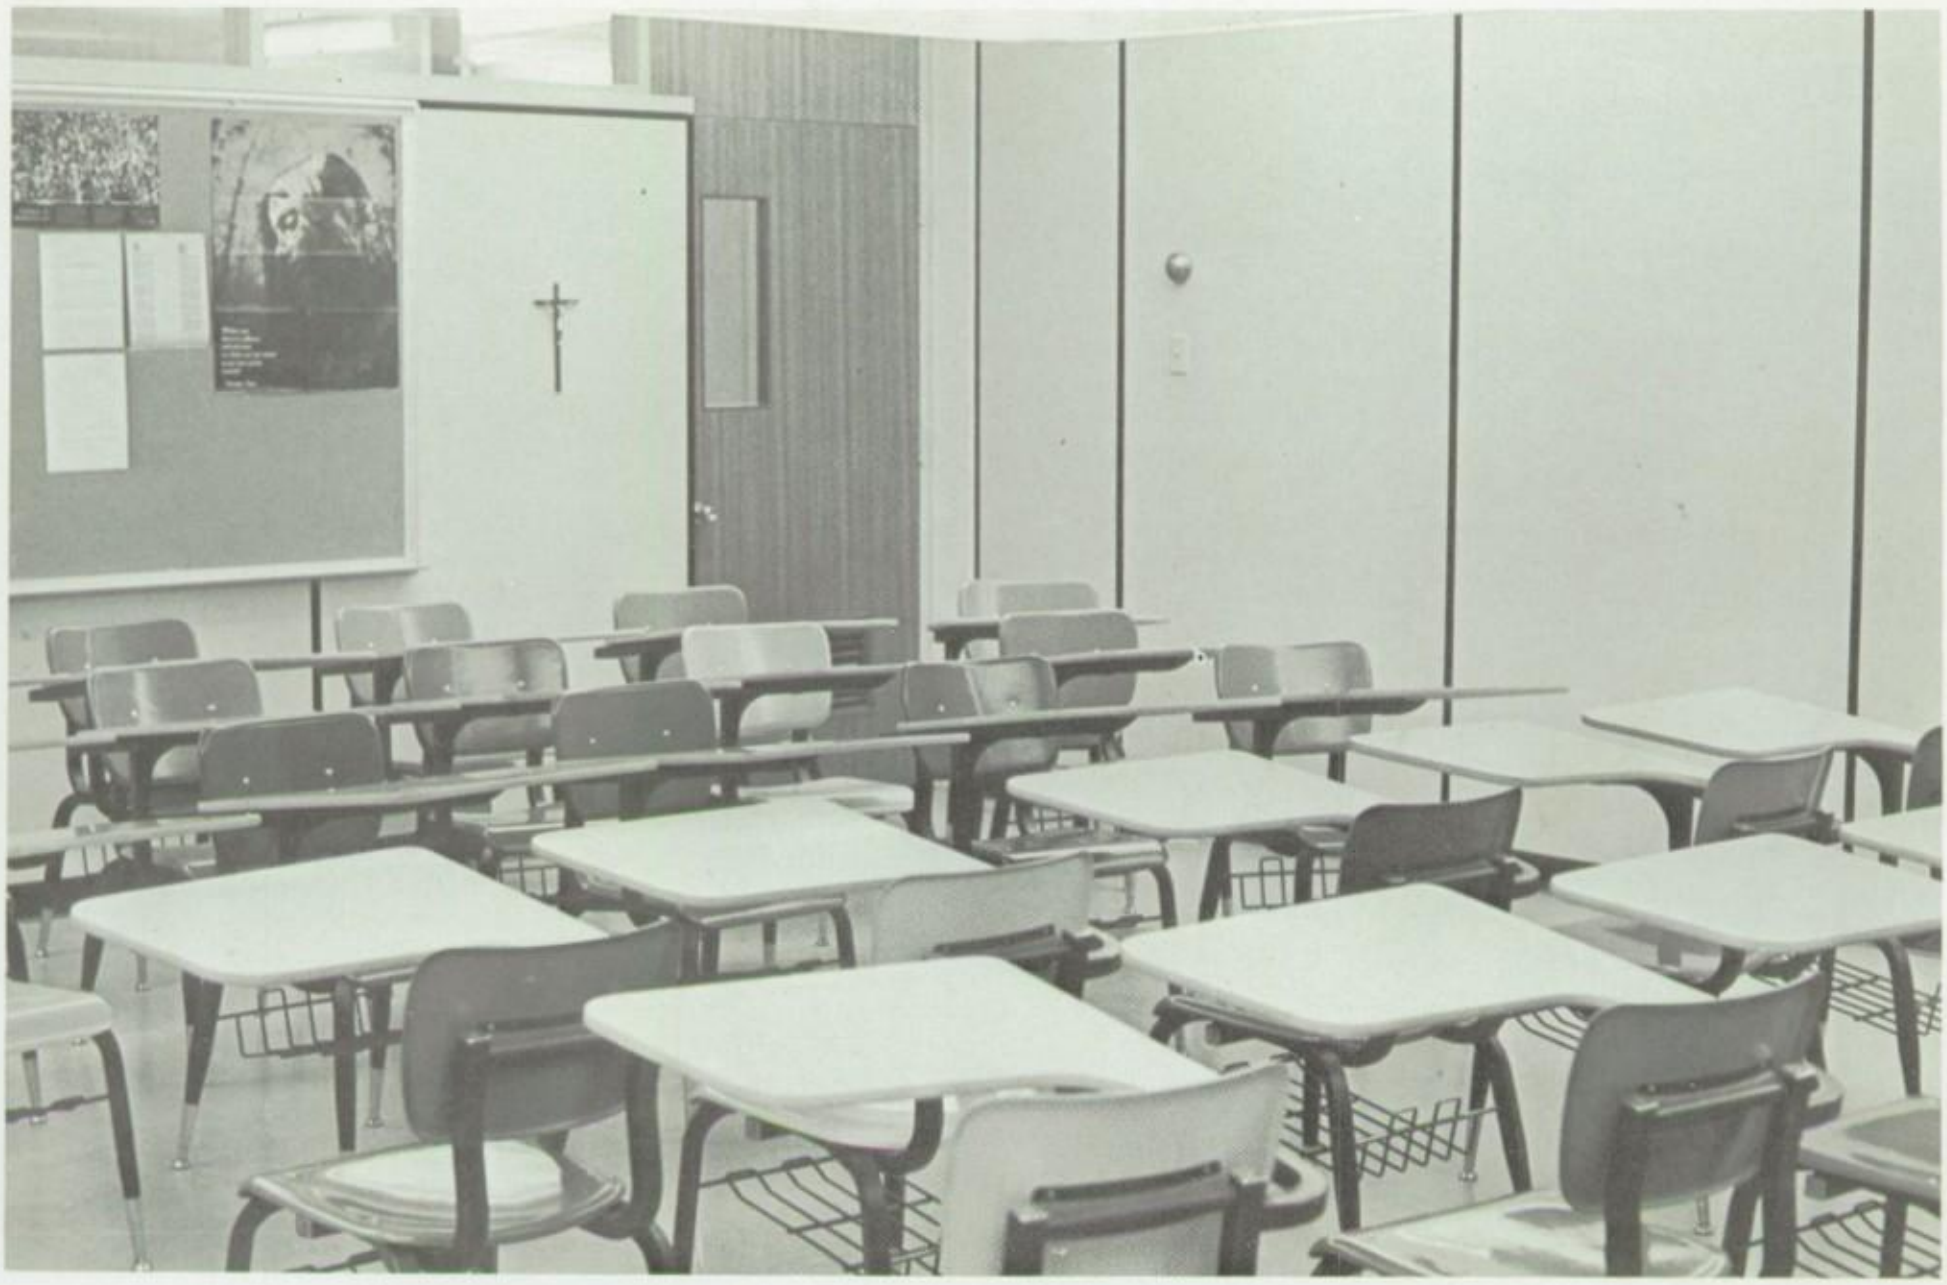
A moment before the action begins, there is only emptiness. There are great empty spaces. Barrenness.

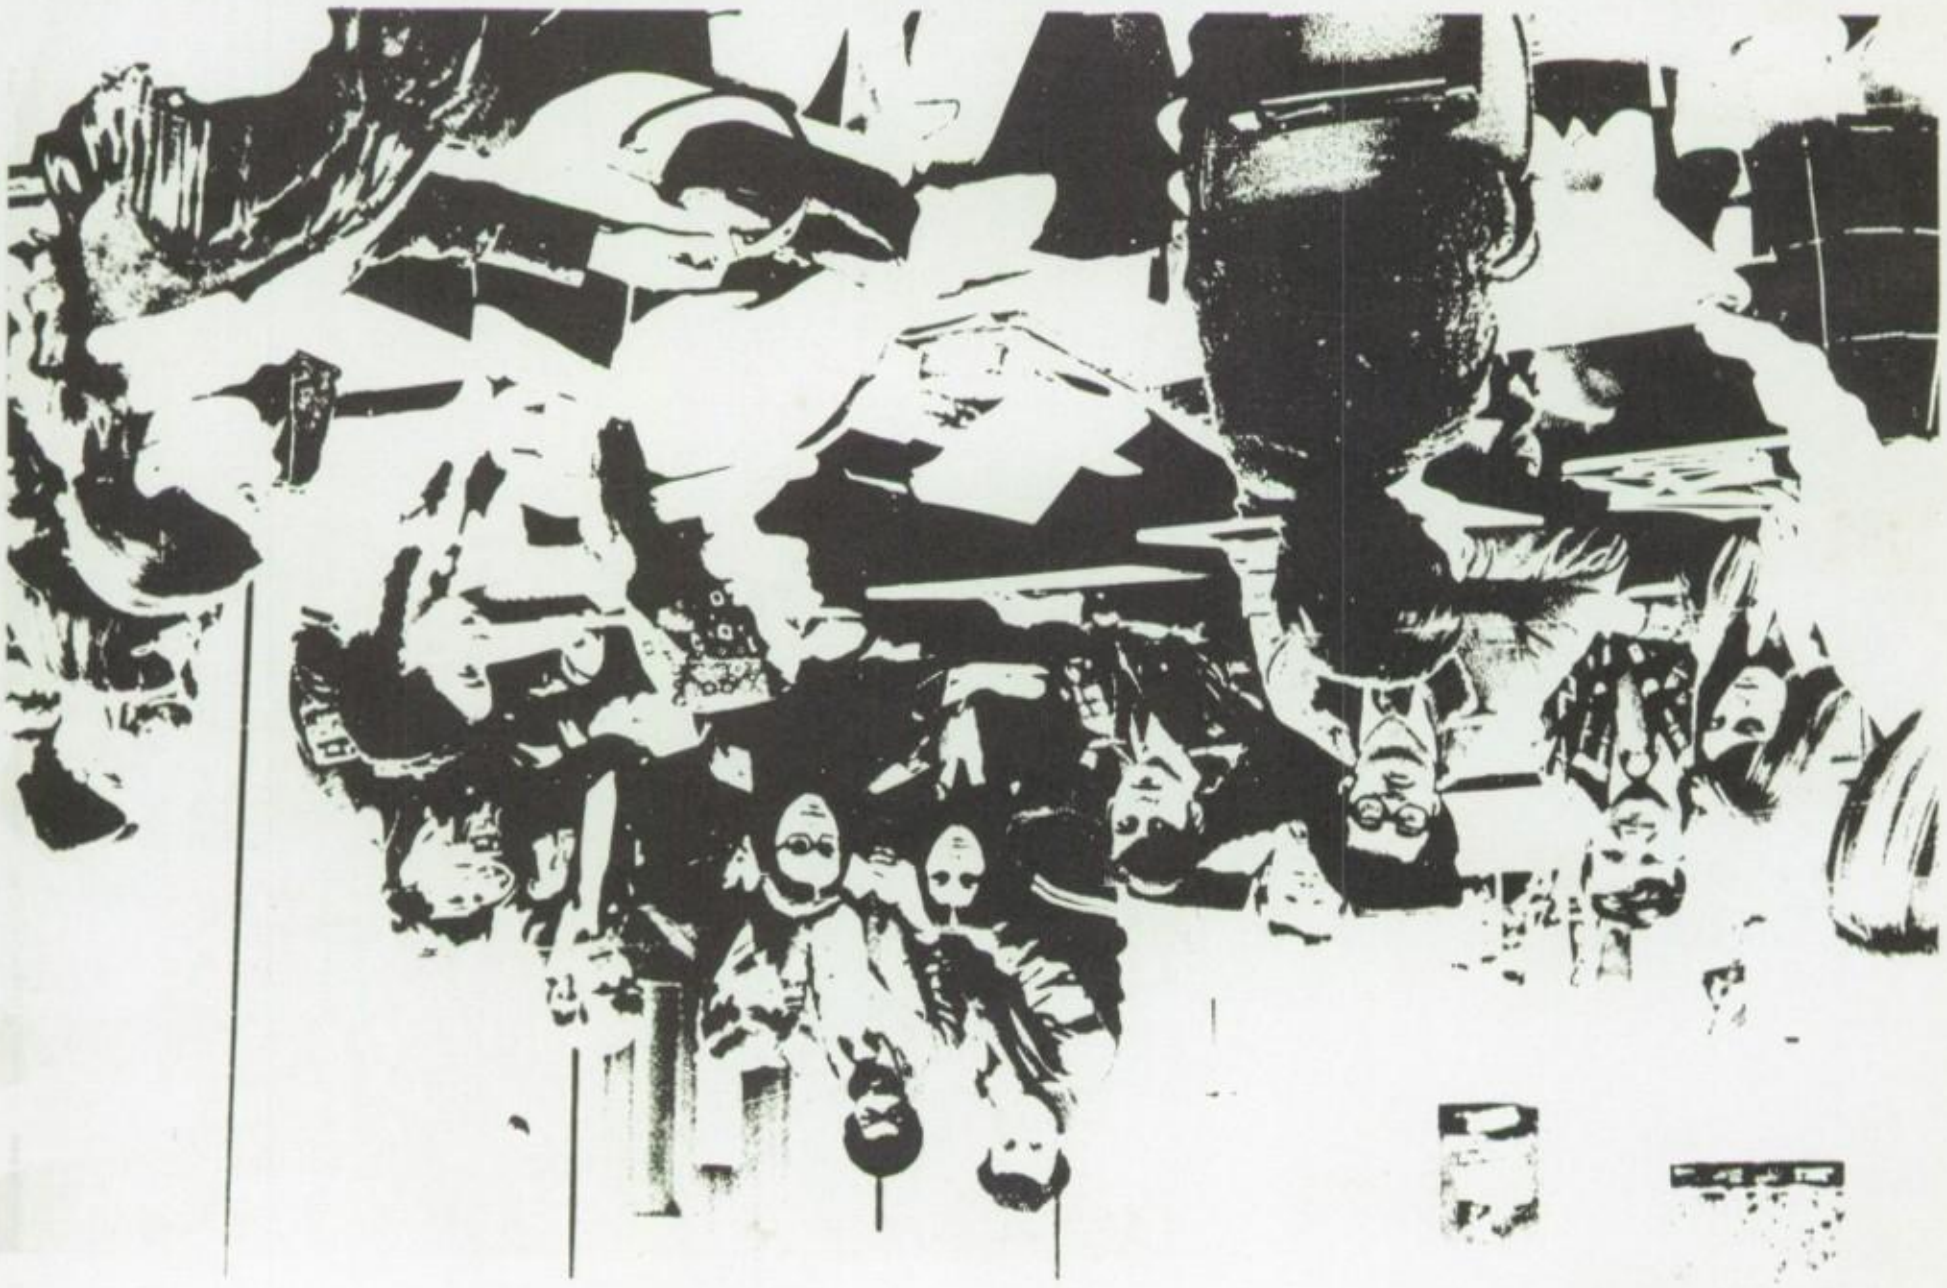
Some areas, like the halls and the classrooms, are dark and silent. An occasional beam of light destroys the effect of total darkness. Yet the shadows add to the loneliness. All should be still at this point. Later the halls and classrooms will fill with people and empty again, like the ebb and the flow of the tide.

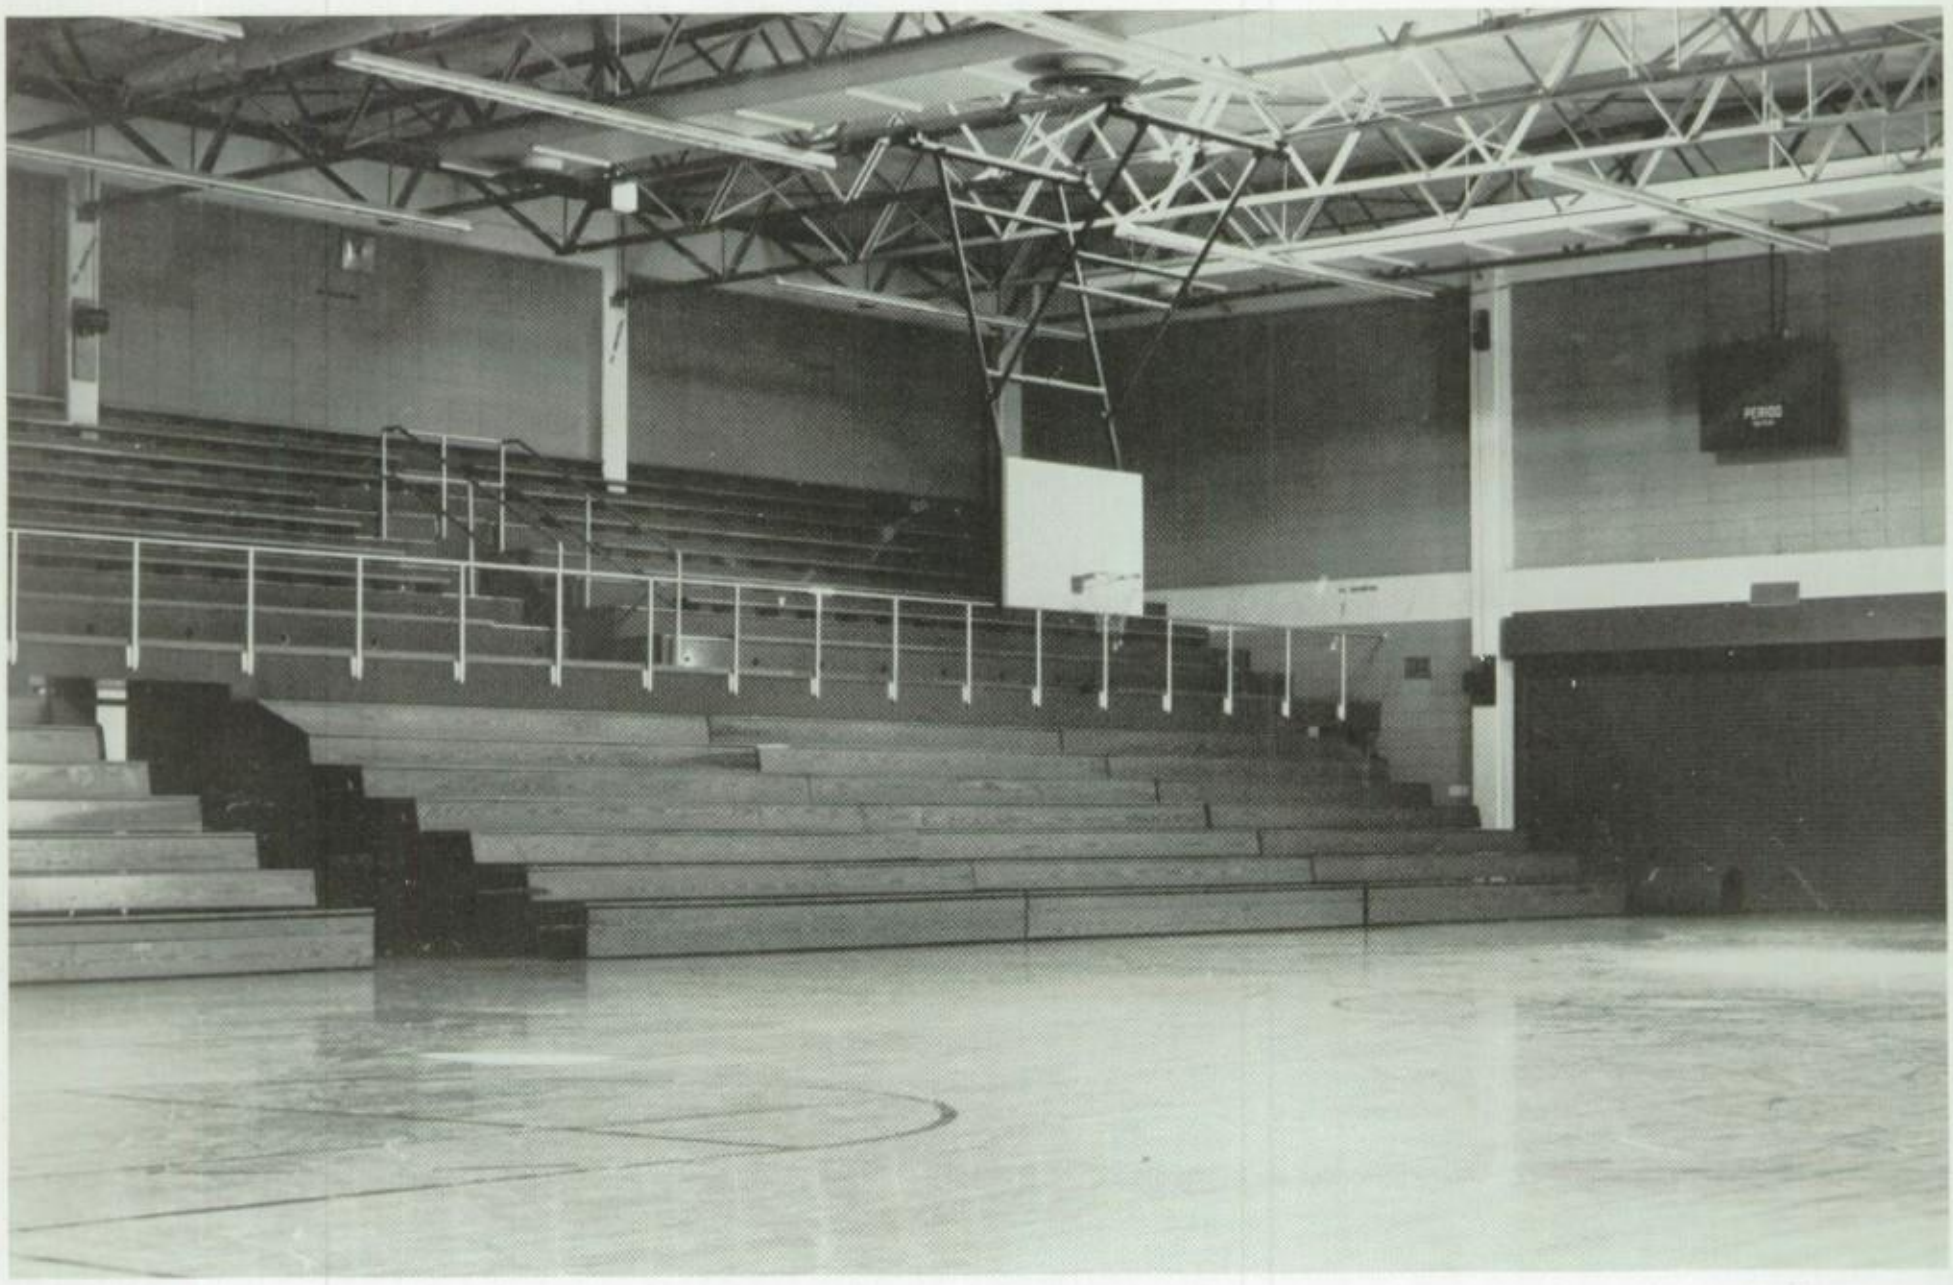
Action will be provided by the characters as they walk to their scheduled places. Some things should be left behind to emphasize the transient attitude of the production.

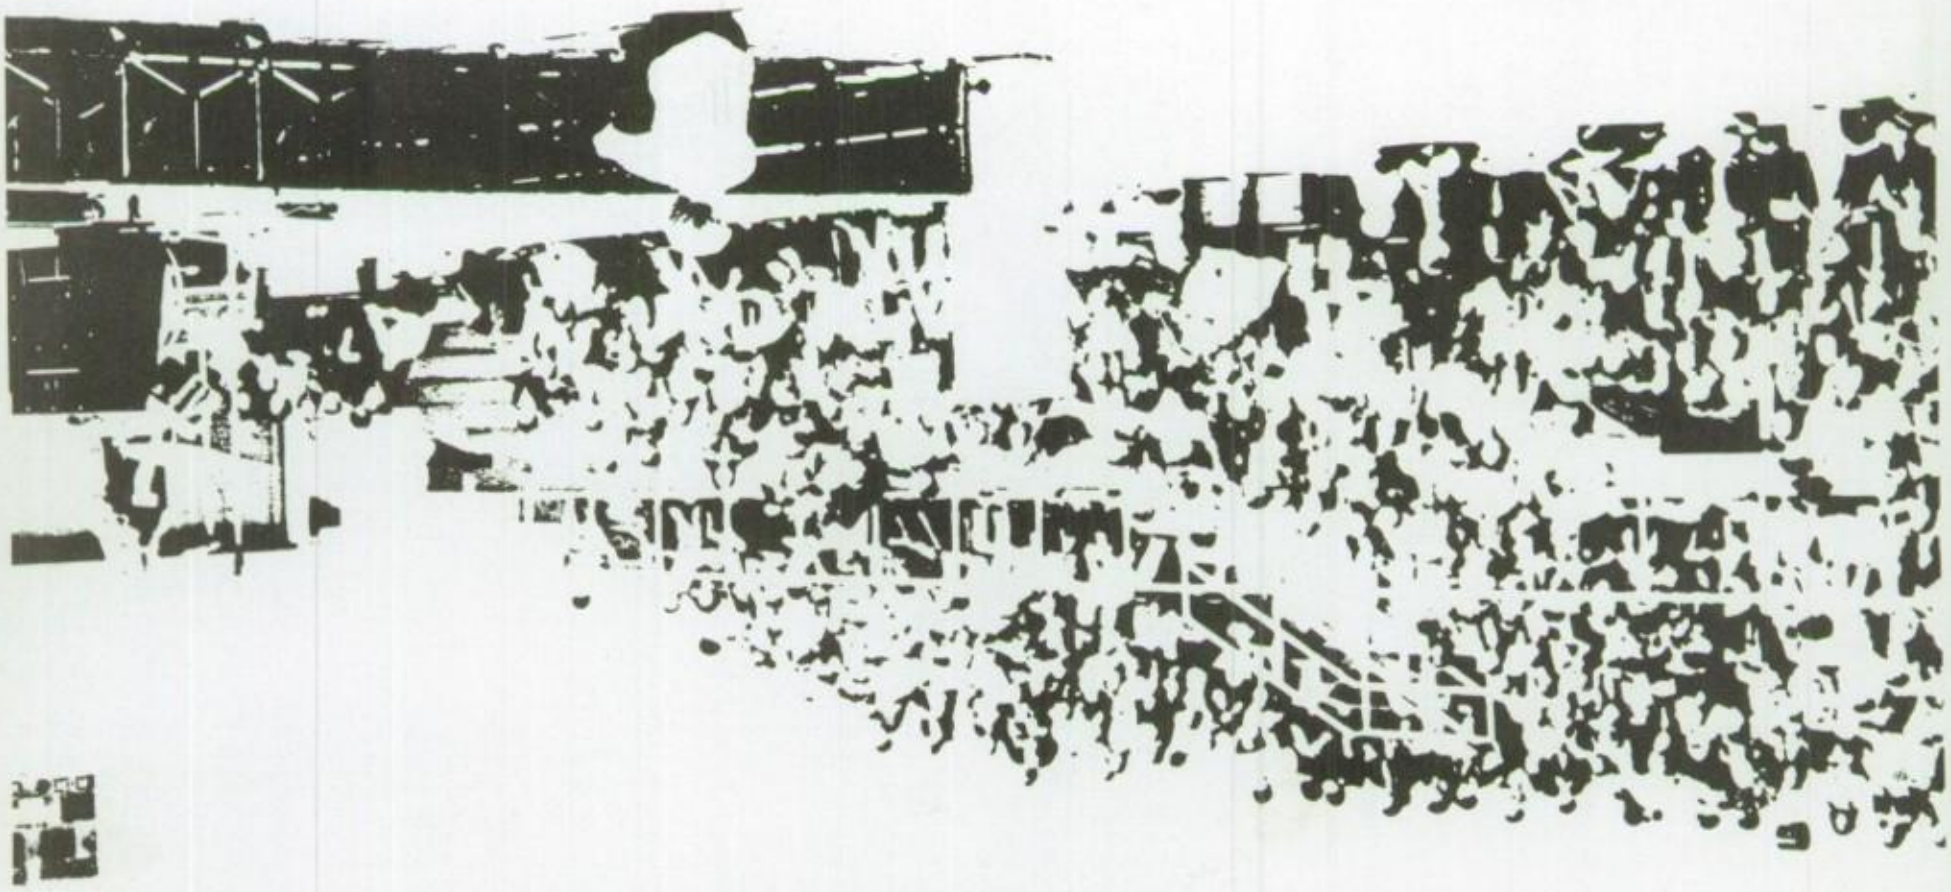
As they pass and re-pass, there is a feeling of longing — of searching. Even when empty, the scenes hold an anticipation for something which is to come. When the scenes are filled, the anticipation is heightened by the irresolution of the people.

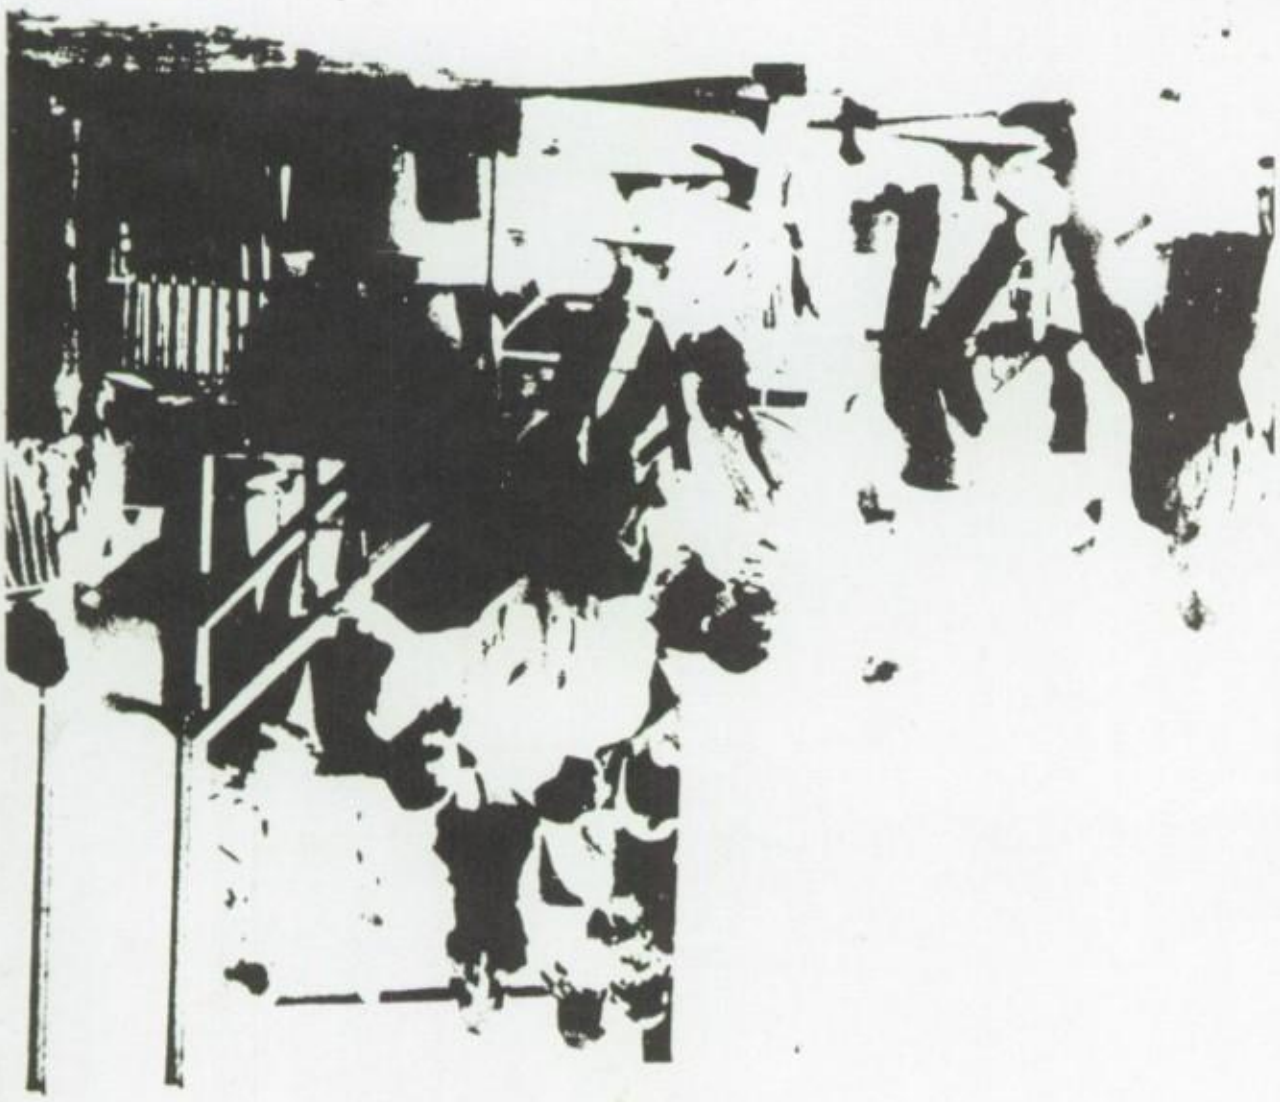












The place is here

Some areas, like the gym and stairwell, are awash in sunlight which enters from an upper window. Yet, even in the sunlit areas shadows lurk everywhere. Above all, there is stillness . . . anxiety and waiting.

The scenes may alternate between wet and dry, as the director likes. However, it should be conveyed that the scene in this area is somewhat at the mercy of the elements.

Later the gym and stairwell will fill with people, seemingly unconcerned. The shadows will recede but still exist. The stillness will be turmoil. Expectation will still the anxiety, and waiting will still be there. Perhaps the expectation will always be there. The scene should then be at the mercy of the people rather than the elements. The director may continue the alternating wet and dryness as he wishes.

The personnel shows

After a while the faculty arrives and are seen unpacking, sorting, and organizing the educational procedures. Here, too, there is an air of expectancy as they stock shelves and desks, hang maps, and fill files.

They hang placards, meet, confer, work, and meet again. The air is electric with excitement. Yet there is little tension. The atmosphere is relaxed as if there were no student schedules to revise, no courses to plan, no time limits.

The assistant principal and principal discuss plans.

The Sisters return after a summer of study and relaxation — toward the end of July.

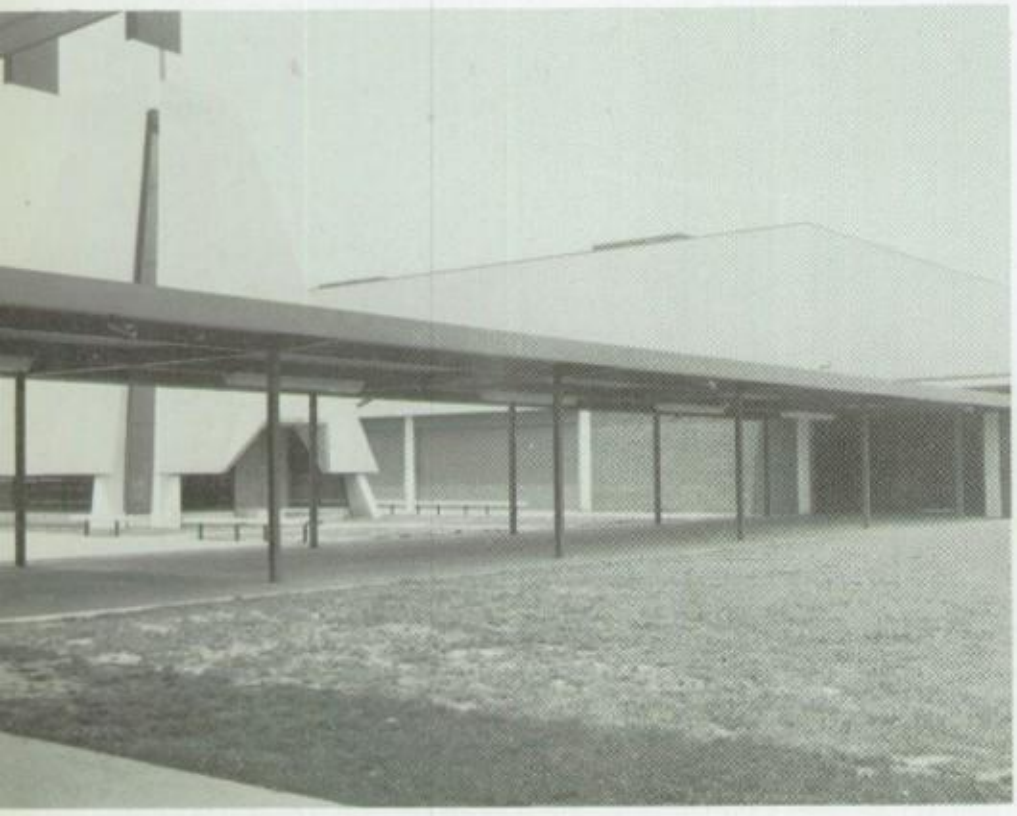
Behind the scenes

And all the while there are people pushing brooms and mops across the area. They are unnoticed by those who are the center of the action, and yet so very important to the future production.

About this time the audience should hear muffled voices and banging of metals. On close inspection, one can see several women in white busily fixing foodstuffs. In spite of their shrill voices and noisy preparations, they radiate happiness and interest in their work.



Right: Mr. Doug Scott gets the bottom of the stairs.

With Robert Rozanski one is not quite sure it is dirt he is after.

The breezeway is empty for the last time.

And on the scene

Daily Mass is also drama — with Father O'Donnell.

Lights come up to reveal another portion of the stage. Here there are groups practicing intensely. Over and over they pantomime movements, words, feelings.

And everywhere there are mystic rituals and silhouetted action. Things have begun — but not yet. The beginning is still to come.

Left: Someone studies her script as she rushes to the meeting.

Leaders prepare for success —

There are sounds of political rallies and campaign speeches as the thunderous government stirs.

Andy Johnson, Pat Dupuis, and Ken Rathnow attend a Student Council workshop.

Below: Louise Burden, Sue Eskew, Julie Dunn, Janet White, Ken Rathnow, and Robert Baker all attend Pelican State workshops during the summer.

And a little fun.

Those first booster practices were hectic.

Booster Officers — Becky Eskew, Janet Descant, Eileen Redmond, and Martha Flynn pause for a friendly game during their summer booster leaders workshop.

The rhythmic sound of drill and marching feet are interspersed with the laughter of relief. There is precision — and irregularity — but all blend as the beginning approaches.

Hard work gets things done.

About this time several people appear on stage. They begin writing and photographing, for always there will be those who will record history. And rightly so, for these characters must be reminded of their mistakes as well as their triumphs, if they are to keep their balance on stage.

Tim Moore examines his summer workshop notes before he sets up his photographic equipment.

Sister Angelina and Sissie Schonfeld talk over a Talon theme for '72.

Teresa Phillips, Sidney Tassin, and Kathy Saucier go out to sell ads for the Talon. And they do a good job of selling.

"There's music in all things if man has ears; The earth is but the music of the spheres."

Now it is clarinet practice.

Music is heard continuously throughout these early scenes. It is the music of life — emotional, dissonant, consonant. The drums maintain a steady beat like a pulsing heart.

Now it is marching time.

And now they have it all together.

A choir stands at right. Oblivious of the growing activity, they turn printed notes into songs of life. And they, too, are like the songs they sing — covering the entire range of life.

It's the working together that brings the success.

While all this practice is going on, Sister Norberta quietly catalogs the new library books to be shelved and ready for the beginning of school.

Tom Petrus, Tim Petrus, David Randall, Aubrey Alexander and Jimmy Wells at the piano.

Nothing like a party

At some time before the main action begins, the characters should gather happily together.

They are nostalgic, and there is a happy-sad mood. There is the joy in seeing so many old acquaintances. The sadness in knowing they will never be together again. And there is nostalgia in remembering shared times which have slipped into silent memory.

And so the characters should eagerly gather some token, such as signatures from one another. Then they part.

Now it's all over. Andy Johnson helps carry chairs back to the cafeteria.

The Chapel, silent all summer, is ready for action. Empty parked cars indicate people working somewhere.

Attention focuses on a dance line of eight girls. They practice long and hard, but they are exuberant in performing. Then, too, there are those who compete in athletics.

Unlike most of the other groups, these are dead serious. There is not the relaxed, almost carefree atmosphere which pervades the rest of the area.

The dance line is periodically replaced by several girls in bright sequined costumes who twirl. They, too, are happy, thrilled to perform.

From the wings come the props and encouragements of unseen hands and voices. The performers are dependent on these helps.

Athletic Association officers, Mr. Bruyninckx, Mr. Foltz, Mr. N. Matthews, Mr. F. Matthews, back the team in every way.

Majorettes, N. Couvillion, V. Bordelon, and S. Springer are ready to twirl.

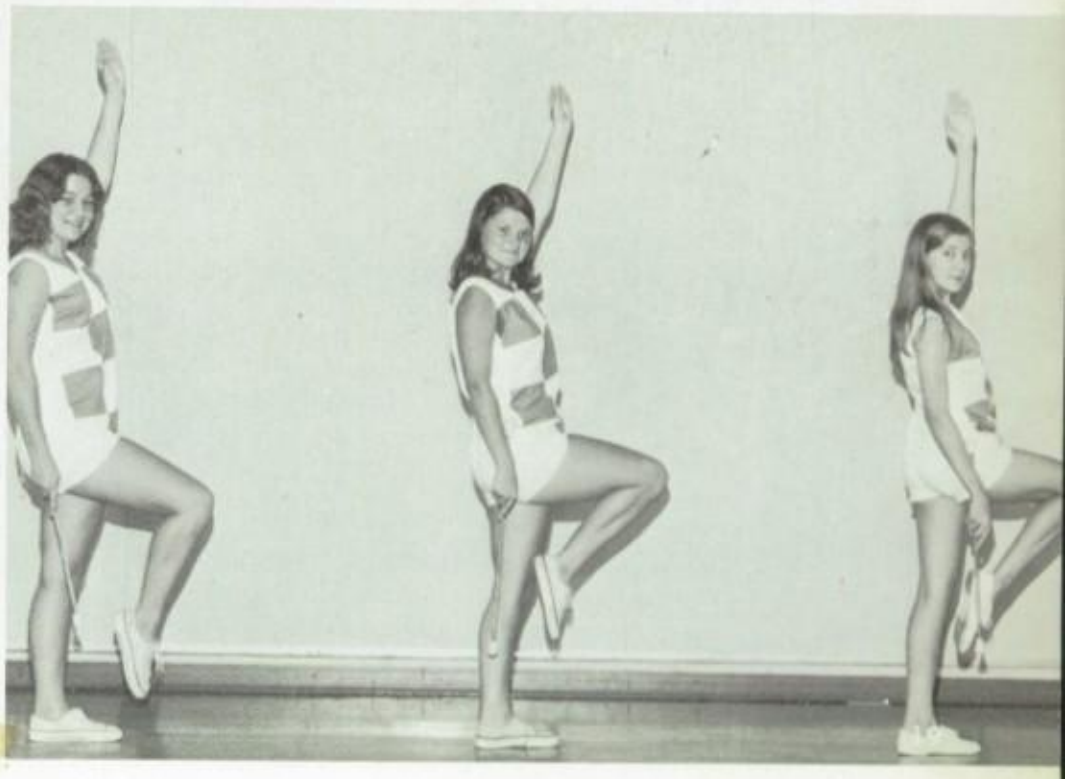
Coach Billy Horn gets his players in shape.



The stage is set; the crew is ready

Few of the many people passing in and out the school doors those first hot days of August knew the long road that still lay before them. But they came. Slowly at first, then like running water over a broken levee. Why they came is hard to say. But their coming was a monumental tribute to that which is Menard and that for which Menard is — the learning of the life of freedom and love.

Father W. Larroque, Mrs. Sarah Martinez, and Mrs. Pat Barrios spent long hours and days making and copying schedules. They knew vaguely what it would be like when the hordes came down.

Every year the WALKER OLDSMOBILE furnishes Menard with an Eagle Wagon to use in connection with sports. This wagon is indispensable throughout the year — every year.

All props ready! All characters in place!

LET'S GO!

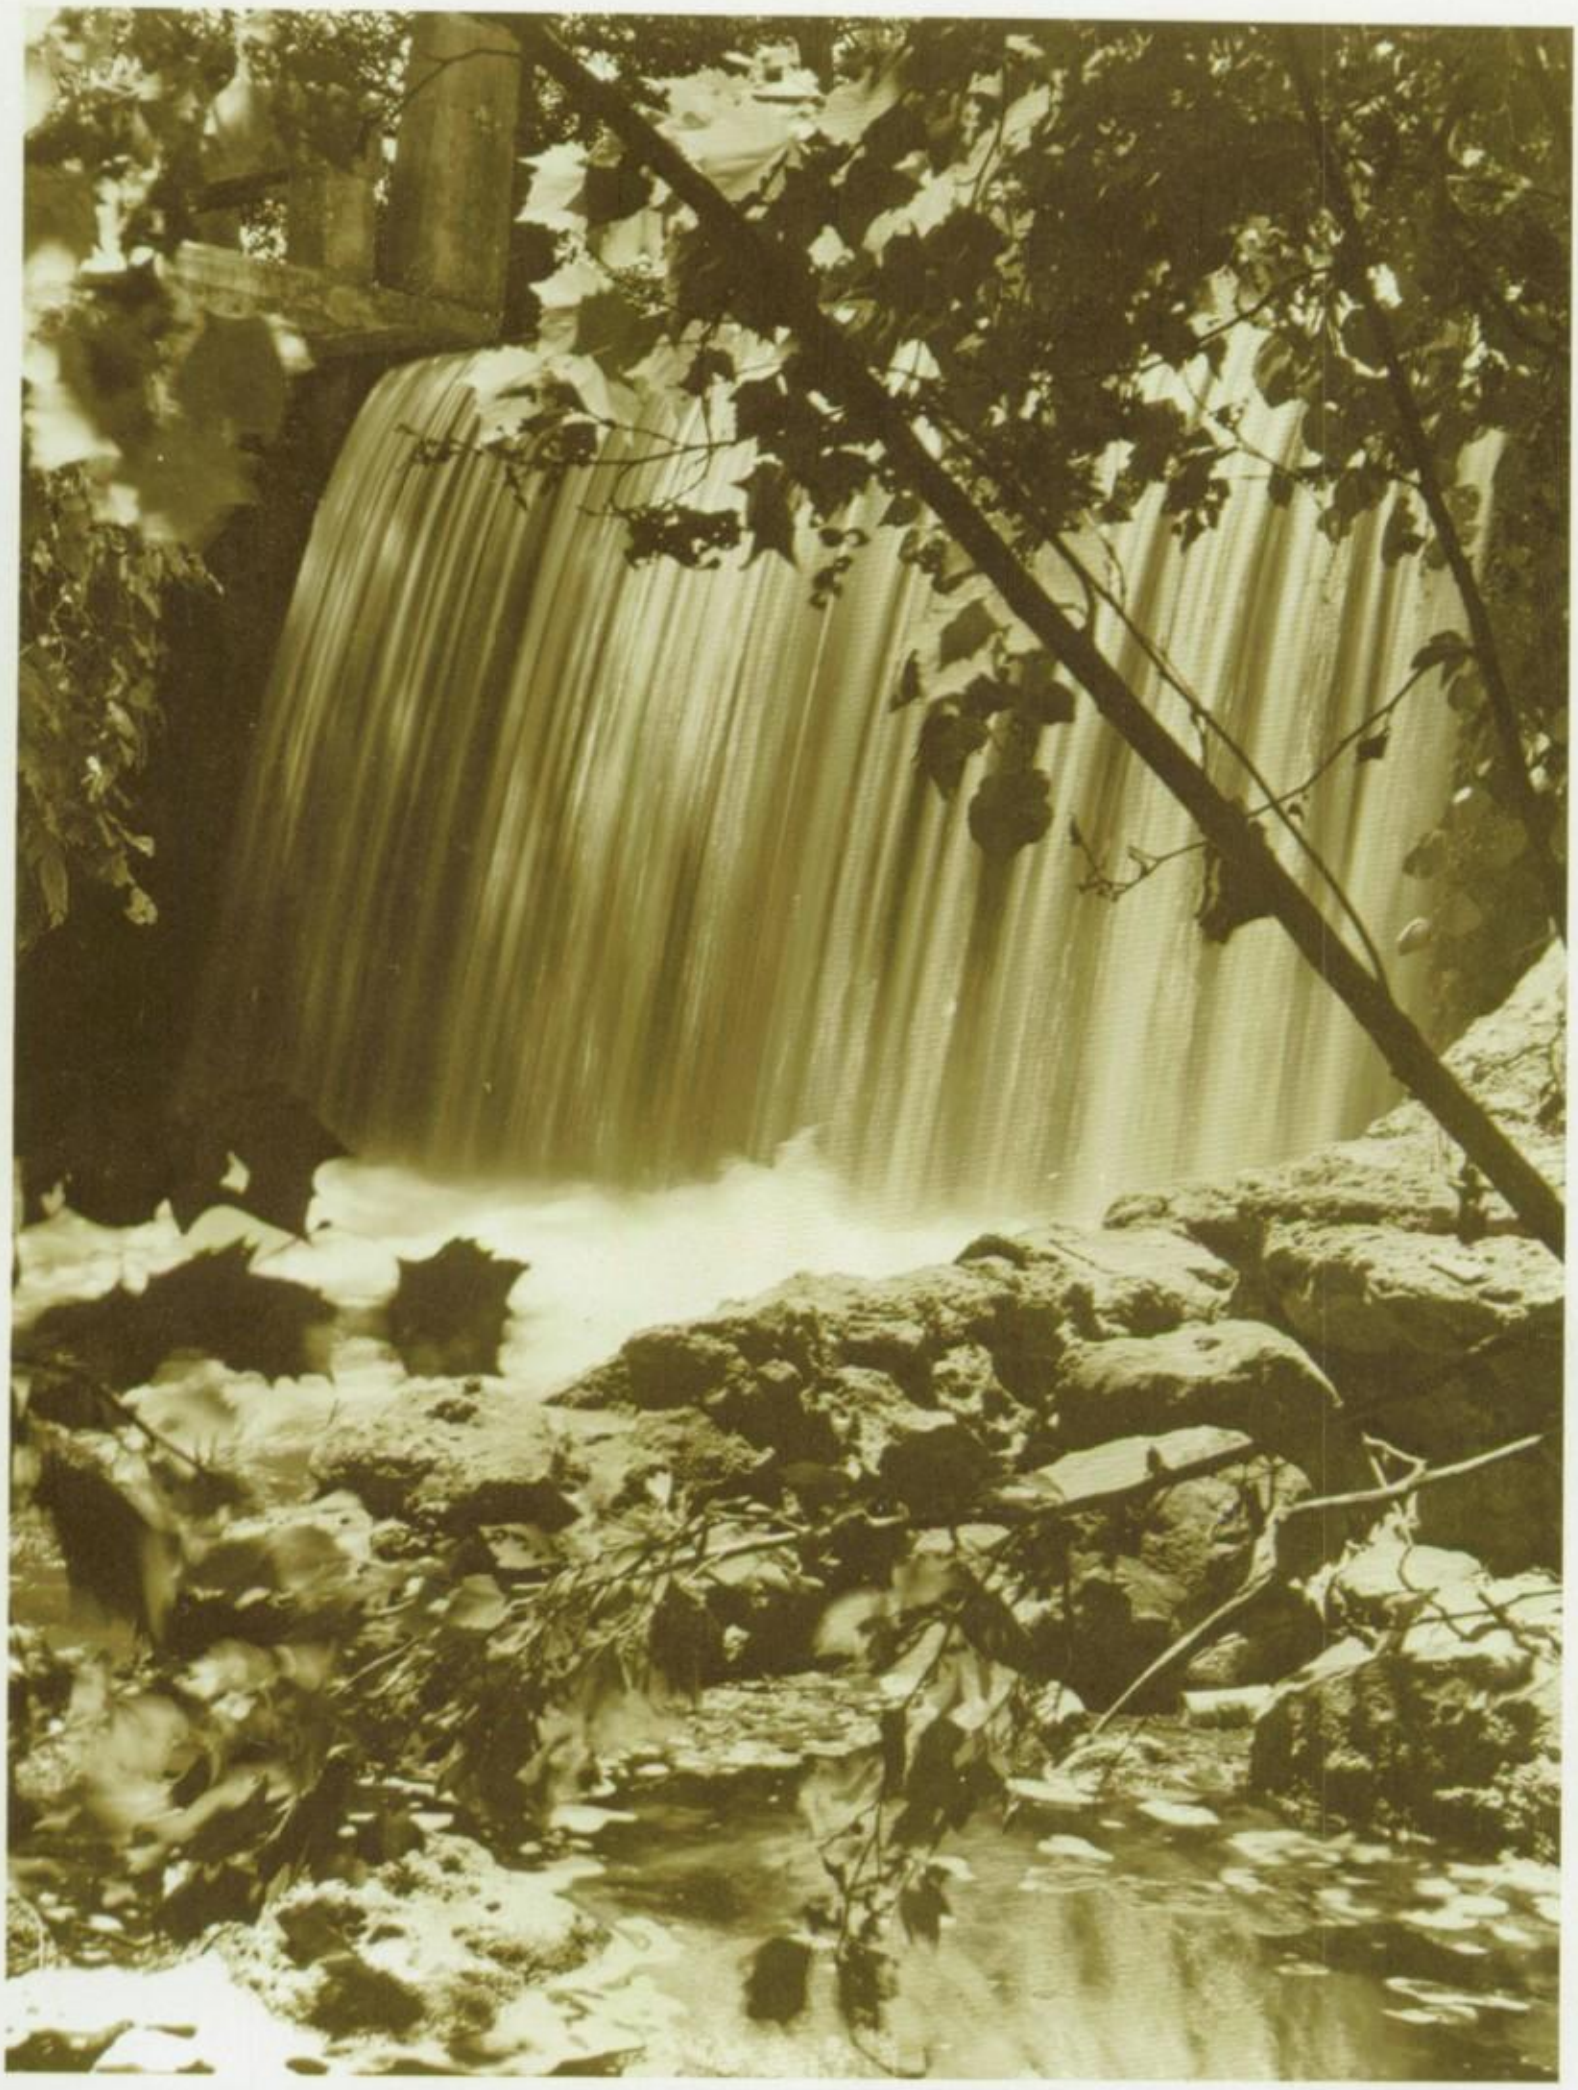
Act I: The Planting Pains

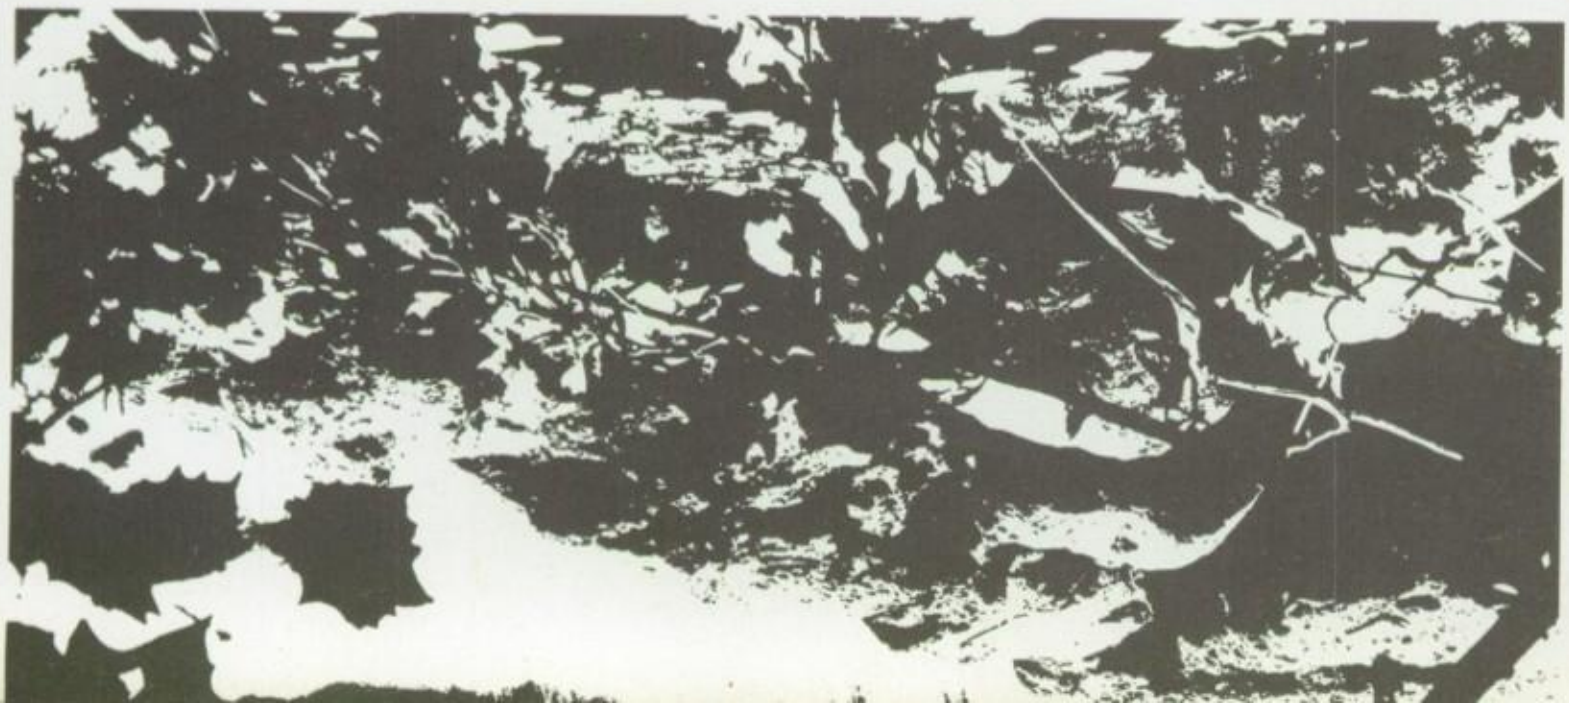
Here we stand at the beginning. All things before have been only a preparation for this moment. And even this beginning is a preparation for the next moment. Thus all is only preparation for the final moment. And so we prepare.

And if your preparation conflicts with mine, what of it? It does not mean that you are greater or that I am greater. But simply that our truths are different. If we adhere to our truth then we are great. For faithfulness to one's truth is the measure of greatness. Degree and completeness of truth matter in the end. Devotion to one's truth is far more important. For devotion itself fulfills and completes the eternal and ineffable truth each man has in himself.

And there is truth in the living and in the dead; in the valleys and in the mountains; in the still and in the moving; in the quiet and in the noisy; in the you and in the me. In all things there is truth.

The truth of Menard during 1971 and 1972 is retold on the following pages. It is the truth of many people and of many things. Despite all the unfaithfulness and perversion, it remains the truth.





The beginning

Principal: (in office): I wonder . . . just what are these people like? Will I be accepted? Better yet, will I accept them? There is so much work to be done . . . (fade out)

Senior: (coming on) Wow! Look at me! This is the year! I remember back when I was a . . .

Freshman: (bursting in) Just give me my bike and my marbles, and I'll be on my way.

Father W. Larroque, R. Descant, F. G. Dean, Betty Bryant, Nancy Nolan, Robert Greaser showing rings.

Well, girls, Tommy Wallace has arrived.

Is the best place to start

Senior: (looking around) This is really weird. I used to know everyone. Oh, I don't have time to think about it now. I've got to see about my schedule.
Freshman: (puzzled) I don't understand. I know everybody. Schedule? What's a schedule?
(Senior enters Guidance Office and sits)
Guidance Counselor: (surprised) You've got to be kidding. We don't offer that kind of course here. This is a Catholic school.
Senior: (crestfallen) Thanks a lot, Sister! I've looked forward to taking that since I was a freshman. Speaking of freshmen, I've got to go untie mine. I've got 'em all chained to a post. (exit)

The big rush starts when the bell rings.

The utter confusion of finding the books you thought you left about here is something else.

Tommy Faulk and Brenda Winthrop see Sister Antoinette about schedules.

We chose people

Senior (viewing freshmen) Look at 'em. I know I'm not receiving my old age pension, but I do . . . uh, feel so much older than they seem to.
Junior (looking them over) Really, they do seem much more secure than I did when I was a freshman. Maybe they won't end up as apathetic either.
Freshman I (entering) Come on, y'all, smile — like you know what you're doing. Hey! Wait a minute. What are we doing?

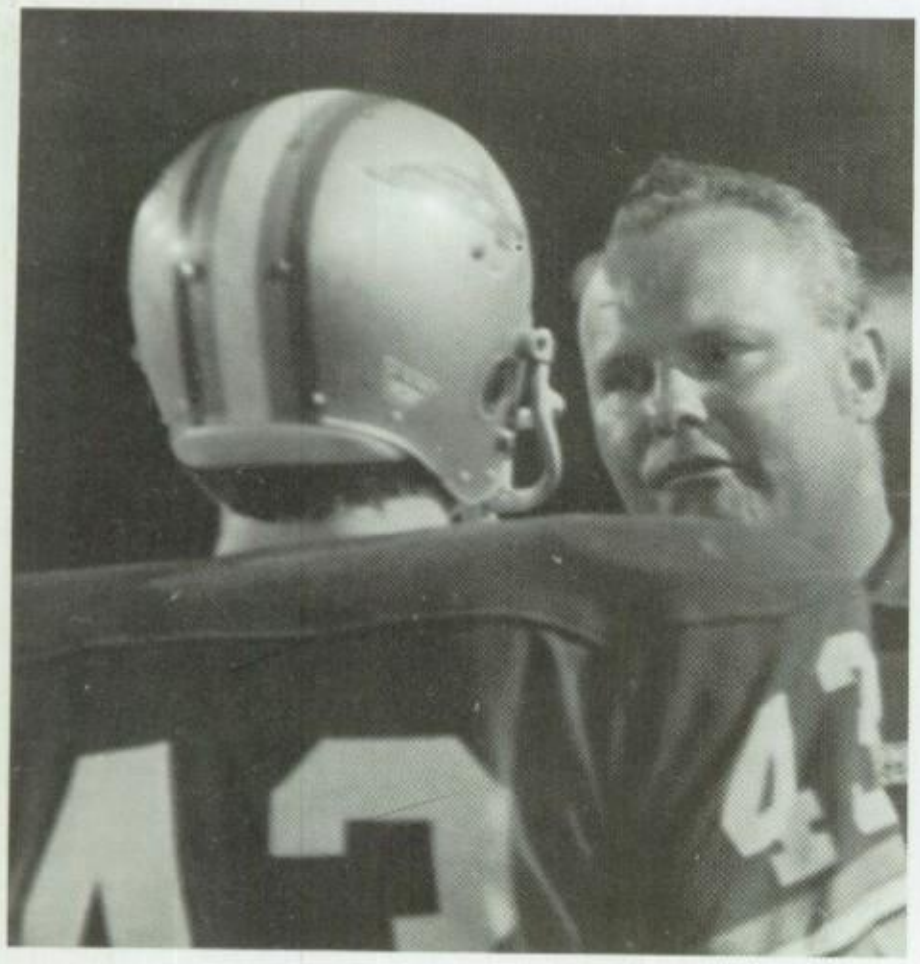
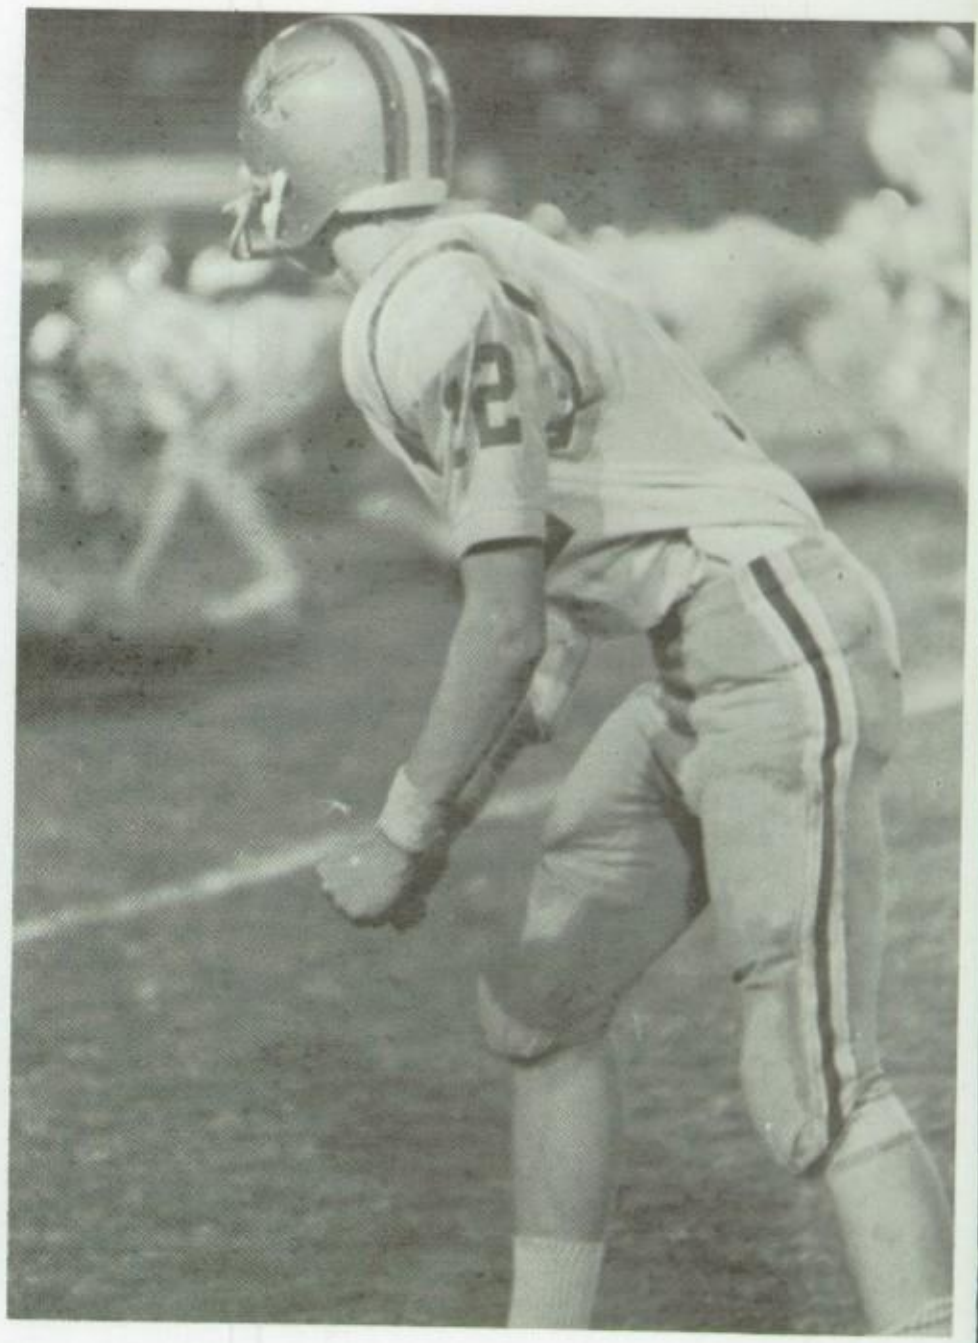
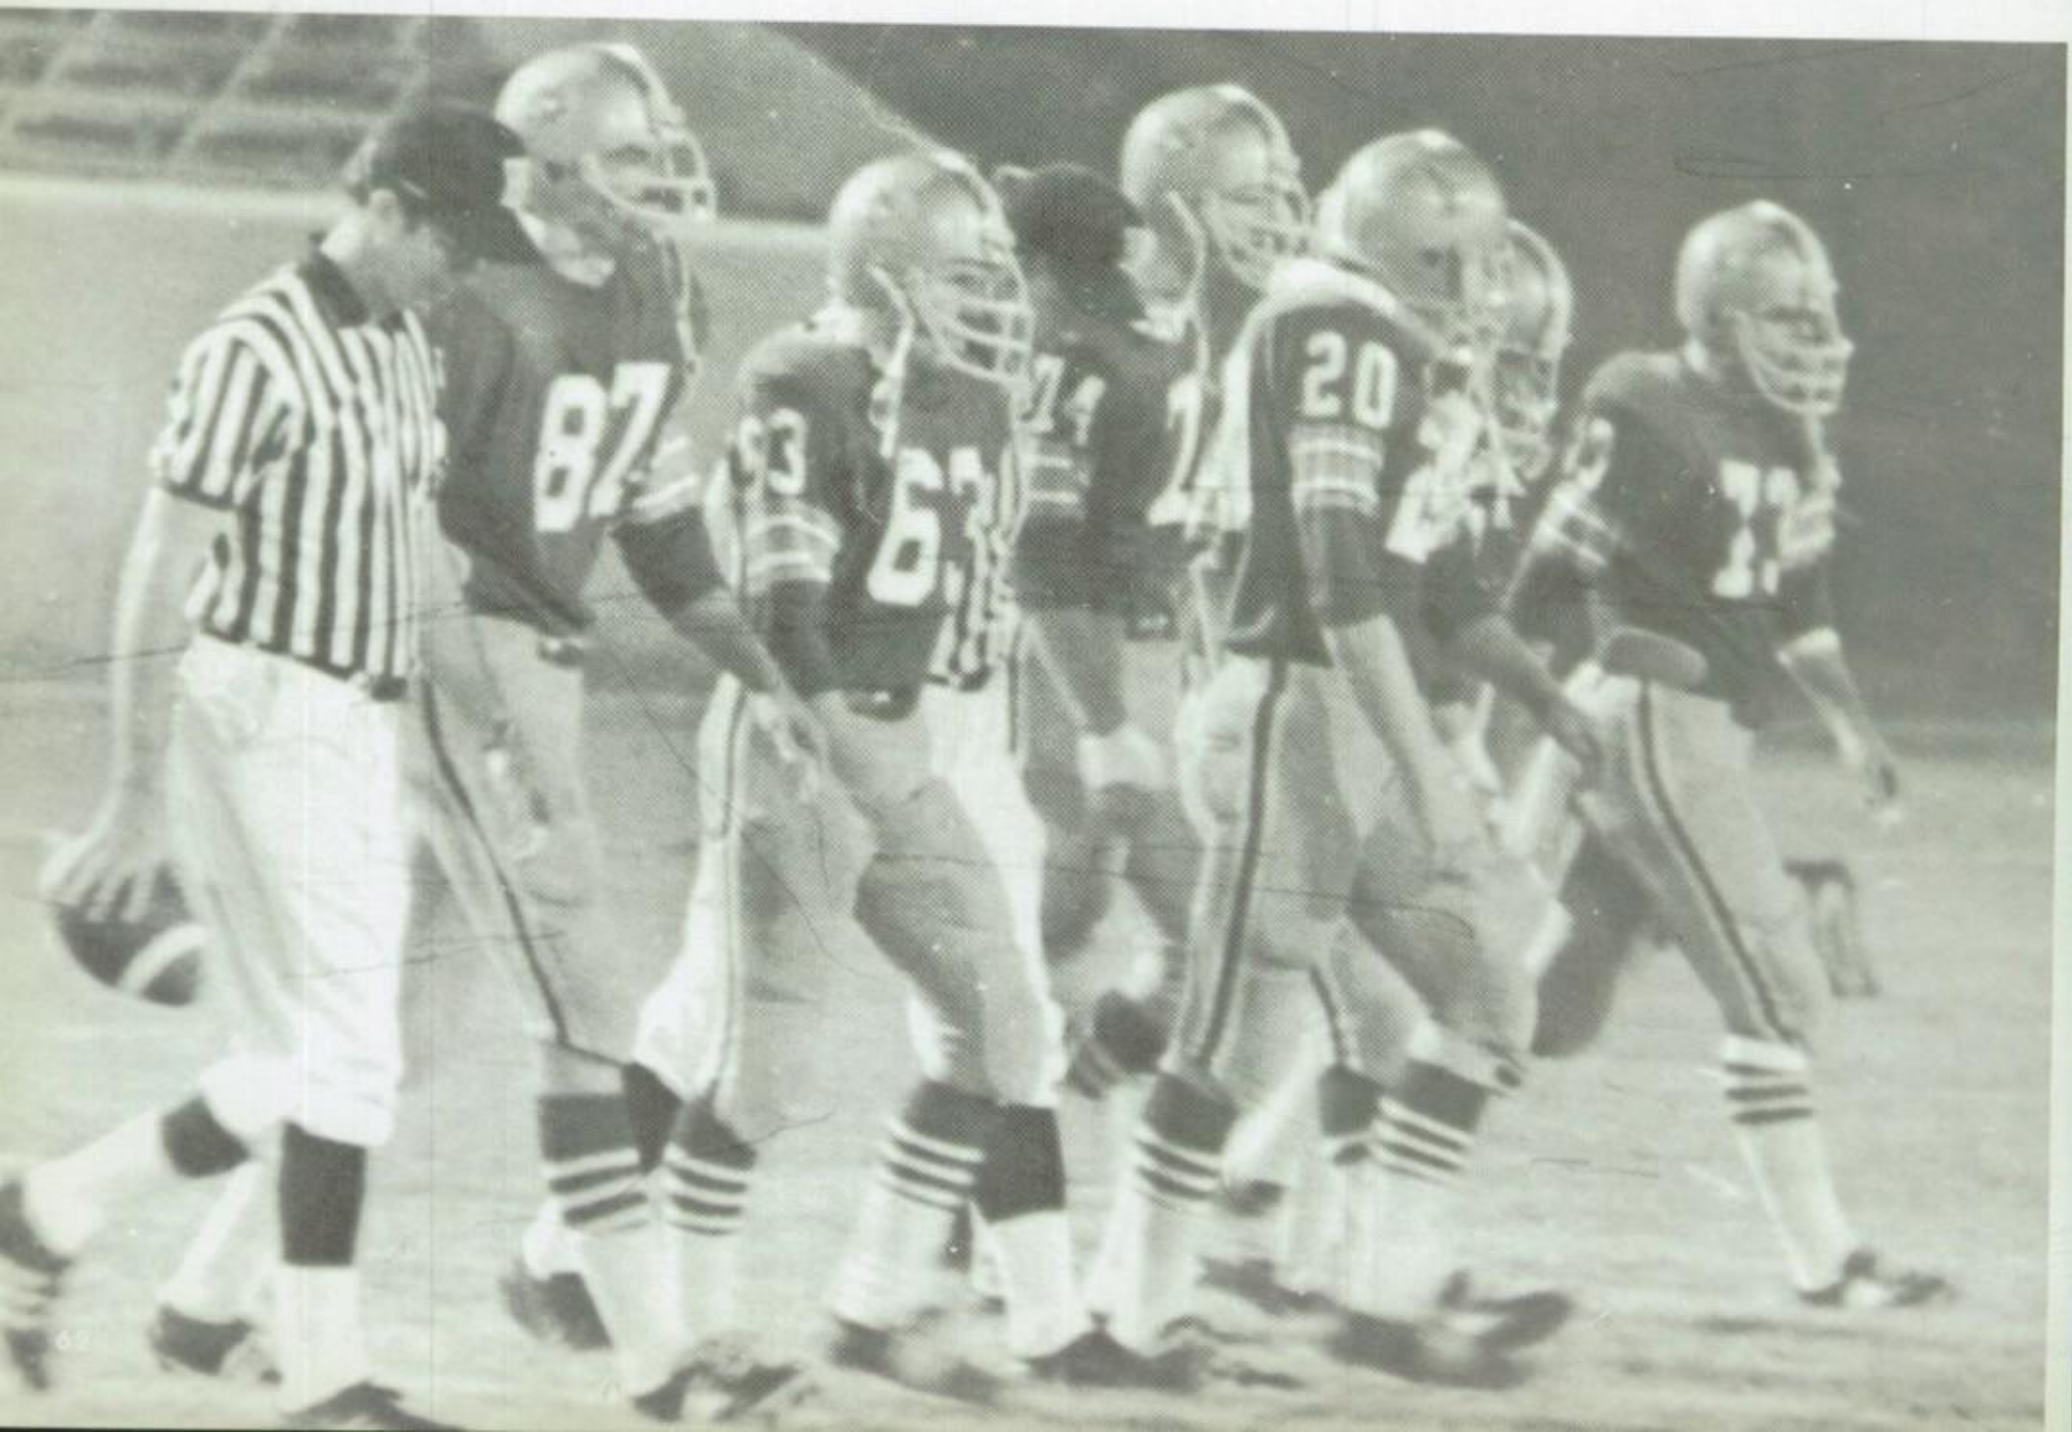
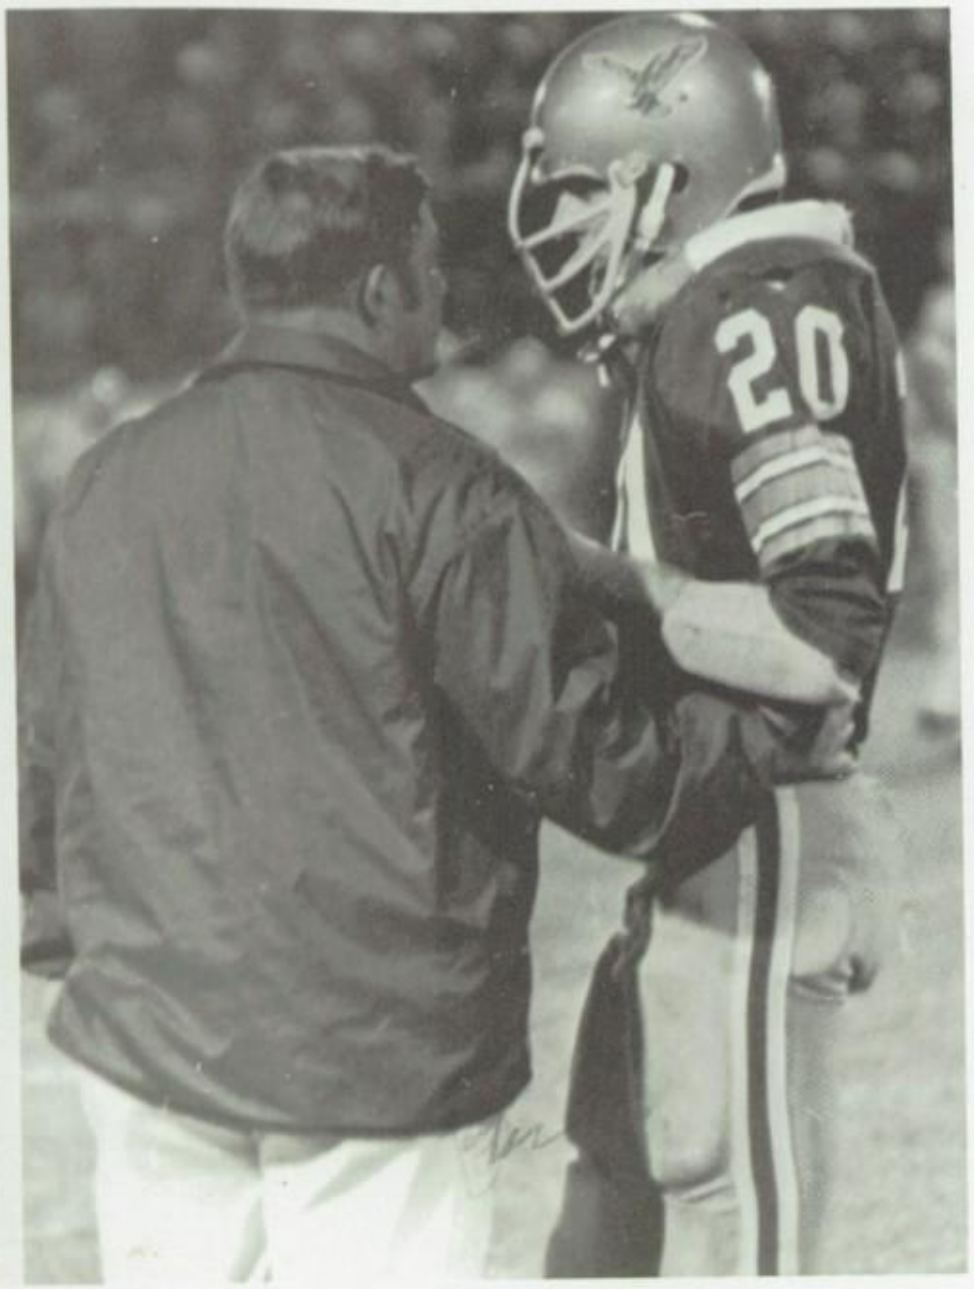
Spirit — a great asset to mighty Eagles.









Narrator: Often determination leads to frustration, and the long hard battle ends in loss of ground — or even defeat.

Coach: The game's not over yet. Don't give up. Something you believe in has got to be worth your while.

Narrator: The game was an accomplishment. You ask WHAT was accomplished. My Friends, there is something valuable and lasting in teamwork — SPIRIT to move on!

Act II: The Greening Gains

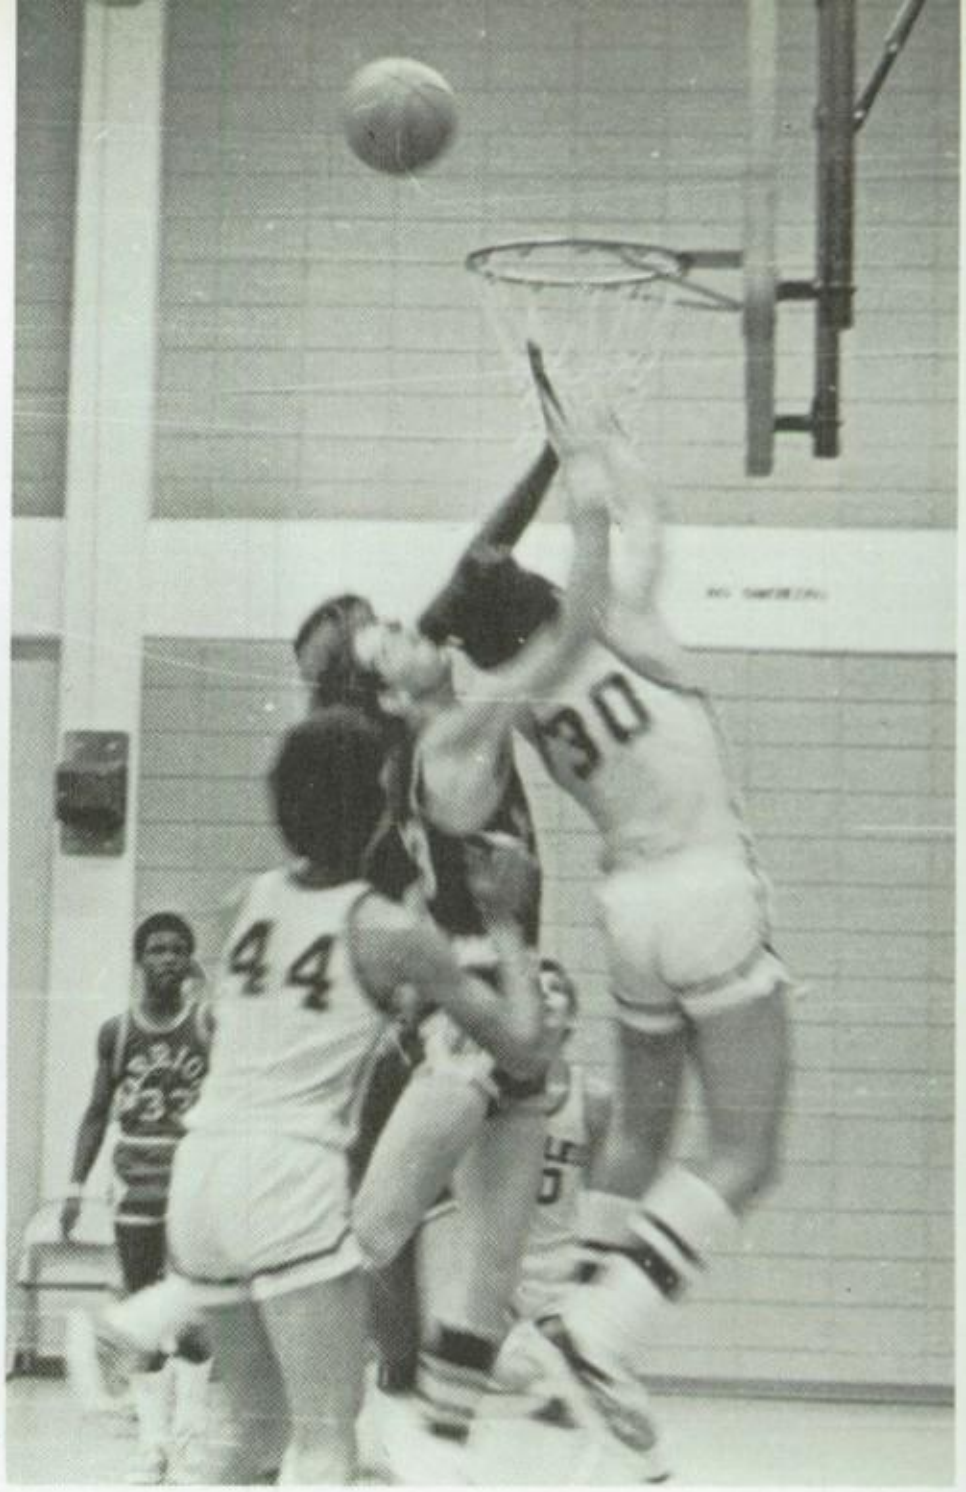
And so the seed was planted and watered. It began to sprout, to grow, and to be pruned. The seed was truth, but the truth sometimes sounded false. Doubt and subjectivity therefore entered into the preparation and into the truth. There was the need to know why, not just how. And there was the recognition of the truth in very person, in all things. No longer was there just one "right way." Diversity and the experiences of life became important.

Tomorrow will find new ways for a new generation. True education becomes necessary as labs, independent study, special projects, multi-media presentations replace training, rote, and propaganda. The potential and uniqueness of each individual is recognized. The world begins to blossom.

Finally the action climaxes. On a starry night, wet with the bitter sweet tears of nostalgia and happiness, some leave — their goals reached. And yet they remain. For their ideas, their work, and their memory remains to nurture and fulfill another crop.

"I'm going to give it all that I've got."

Fan: As I sit and watch our players run down the court, I ask myself why they do it. What could motivate anyone to devote himself to hours upon hours of grueling practice? . . .



. . . Then I look at each individual player and I know the answer to my question.

. . . and the only safe place to live is on the Indian Reservation.

Freshman: What do you mean — a Black/White game.
Sophomore: Blacks and Whites play.
Freshman: So what's so new about that? They have been playing all season.
Sophomore: True. But not the same ones, I guess.

"We'll elect Superman as President . . .

T. Moore

Freshman: What's a National Convention?
Junior: We elect a party candidate.
Freshman: Who do you think it will be?
Junior: Wallace, of course.

The gym is filled . . . students look forward to the day.

Freshmen at Mock Election.

and we'll let Robin save the day."

Delegate 1: Banners are waved, songs are sung. Delegates rave, "Our man's the one."
Delegate 2: Speeches are heard with nominations galore. Voters are polled, caucus has the floor.
Delegate 3: The convention is over. Oh, look at the mess, but that doesn't matter, it was a great success!

And the violent bear it away.

Junior: This is a play without a name.
Sophomore: Why doesn't it have a name?
Junior: It's an original play and nobody knows what it is about.
Sophomore: That figures. Is it sad or happy?
Junior: I can't tell.

. . . if you really feel like you need some time to be free . . .

Teacher: I suppose this is what you call extra-curricular activities.
Student: Right. That outdoor Mass was really neat.
Teacher: And some of the assemblies were clever.
Student: And if it gets too much, you can always get away.

Sophomore: Do I have to register?
Senior: Yes.
Sophomore: Why?
Senior: It's the democratic process.
Freshman: Do we have to vote?
Junior: If you had to it wouldn't be a democratic process.

Man's capacity for justice makes democracy possible.

Menard, break down . . .

President: I was told that if a single man achieves the highest kind of love, it will be sufficient to neutralize the doubts and hates of millions.
Advisor: And you must always remember that in times of crisis, you must avoid both ignorant change and ignorant opposition to change.

The play's the thing

Viewer from audience: The props set the scene, the music created the pretense of reality.

2nd viewer: And the actors took you by the hand and led you into the dramatic and touching world of "David and Lisa."

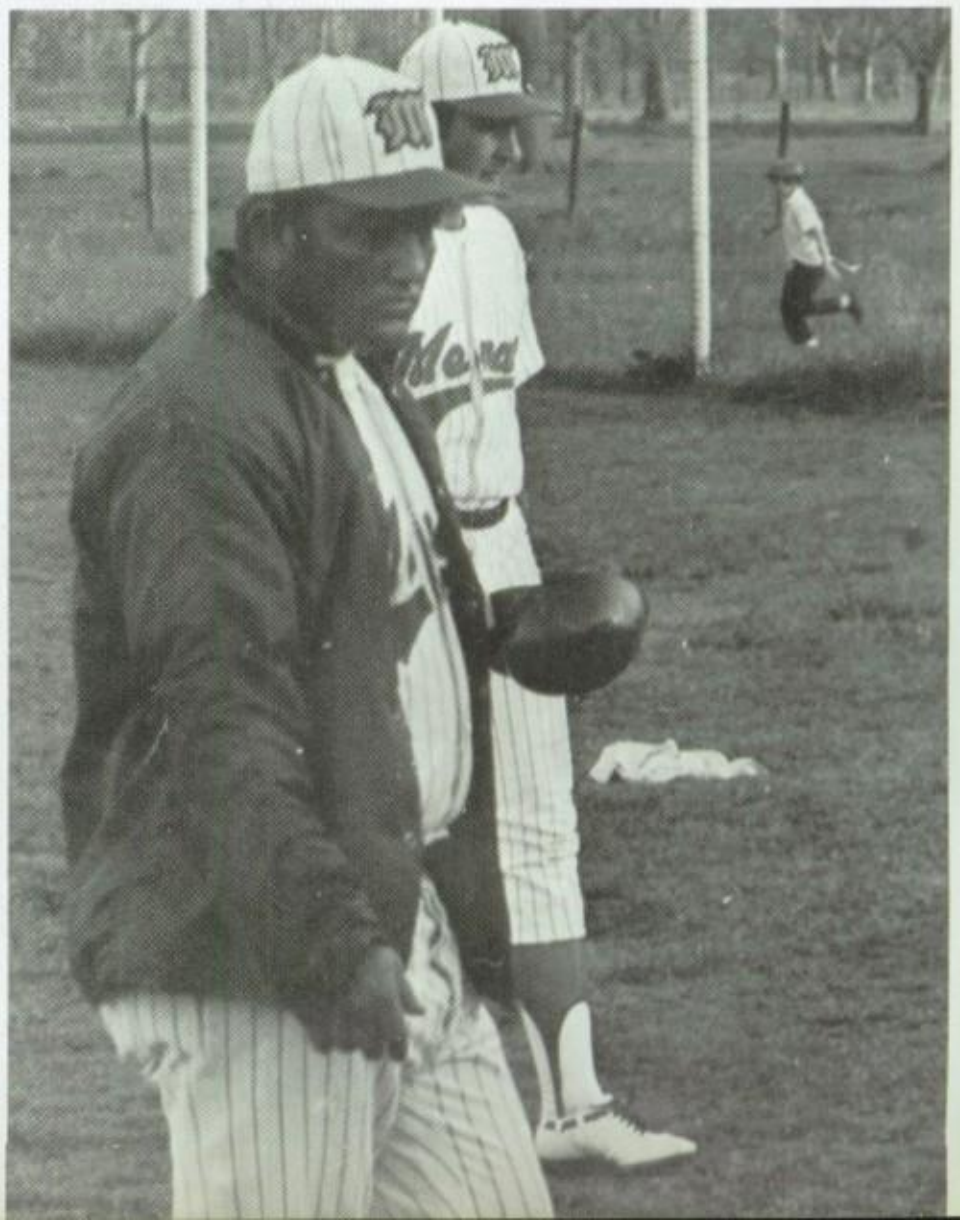
I catch flies for Menard . . .

W. Alford, J. Foltz, M. Byrnes, M. Lienhop.

Right: Coach Raxsdale, Coach Bonial

Coach: Hey! Calm down, man, Sure it was a bad call, but this game's not over yet. Signal the pitcher. Tell him to throw a drop next.
Player: Come outa thar!

The dugout sheltered brave players who fought battles with their anxieties.



Alright men — chin up . . . chest out . . . now MOVE!

R. LaBorde

Catcher: Fire it in here, Baby!
Pitcher: Give me a gun!!

P. Bordelon

Left: Each player does not gain his victory alone.

As we come to the end of the day . . .

Senior: There was a time for laughter.
Senior 2: And a time for tears.
Junior: A time for selling.
Sophomores: And a time to relax.

"You're a poet . . .

Branches
like small men
  next to tall ideas.
Thought patterns:
  of a genius,
    a mad man,
    a housewife's daily
      routine,
    a politician's platform,
    a small child's room,
    an anguished deserter,
    a hungry stomach,
    a pot stick,
    an exterminator's
      workshop,
    a termite's Utopia.

— Jimmy Fiorenza

My heart feels empty
Like a tree in autumn;
My house is empty
Without your love,
For you have gone
And my heart is breaking;
My trees are bare
And my house is vacant.

— Elena Rizzo

The limbs are like tentacles
coming out at you
while the sun sparkles in your eyes.

— Nelwyn Aymond

and didn't know it!"

Men are like fences;
They keep everything
out,
But as with all
defenses,
There is a way through.

— Annette Dunn

An image of misplaced beings trying to become united under one subject;
A struggle for compromise
between the good and the bad;
Each constitutes a meaning from cognition into the trembling hands of society.

— Julie Betar

Pick it the fence;
Pick it the grass;
Pick it the dirt;
Now all that stands
Is a picket fence.

— Johnny Lazarone

The liturgy offers everybody . . .

Priest: Let us go up to the altar of God.
Seniors: And thank Him for our four years of high school.
Senior 2: And ask Him to bless our future and that of all our faculty and fellow students.

Fr. Nowery makes others happy by being happy.

They didn't worry about whether or not the sun would rise — they were prepared to enjoy it.

Only he who can see the invisible can do the impossible.

a way to celebrate

Priest: Climb the mountains and get their glad tidings. Nature's peace will flow to you as the sunshine flows into the trees.

2nd Priest: The winds blow their own freshness into you, and the storms their energy, while cares drop away from you like the leaves of autumn.

Sometimes something really brought the people together, and one would wonder what was bringing them to prayer.

And now a word from our editor:

Hi!

You know, it's been a trying year, even though most of us haven't tried too hard. Right? Left!

When I started as editor this year, I didn't have the faintest idea what I was doing. Now, you might look at this book and say that I still don't, but first let me explain it to you.

In case you haven't noticed, there are no sections in this entire book — no class section, no sports section, etc. We have simply followed a chronological sequence throughout our "play" or "human drama." We pictured activities according to when they happened in the first and second semester — in Act I (1st semester) and Act II (2nd semester).

Now that you know all this good stuff, look over the Talon again and see if it makes any sense. OK?

Hope to see most of you next year. Good luck, graduates!

Sissie Schonfeld, Editor

T.E.C. — Clockwise: M. Flynn, B. Eskew, C. Gremilion, E. DelValle, S. Eskew, T. Bruyninckx, C. Bordelon, J. Descant, R. Ceasar, L. DelValle, and center: Fr. Biggar. The group will do missionary work in Guatamala, (summer 1972).

And after the work is done and the drama is completed, there is still Baskin-Robbins.

Frances, Well, we have lived near each other for years now and we are finally getting to talk to each other. We didn't talk much last year, but we are making up for it now... but we can't know each other as well as we should. I am glad that we are able to finally be friends. Maybe as the year goes on we can get to know each other even better. I'll never forget your parties especially one of them which was why I can't live all the way up here. I learn my past and forget it with you. I'm sure you can live your future and I look forward to the past with you. Frances is the cause to get better in the world can't go too much worse, especially for us.

Well, Good Luck

The drama is over. The seniors are gone. It has been happy and sad. But now that it is finished, the happy moments seem to outweigh the sad ones and in years to come the bitterness of the unpleasant may fade completely.

God go with you in future!

Hey Frances - Remember Cotile!? Cuvie! Been real nice knowing you & '72-'73 will be hittin. See ya in Eng. II & at the Soc Hop. (you can entertain Steve & I with your lies!) Love Cathy Williams

Graduates will remember and fondly laugh over them at reunions.

Next year, and the next, will be our turns. So we look ahead now.

Well Frances,

Last years over so we won't talk too much about that except we had some pretty funny times and some aggravating ones too. Like when you got depressed and was "mad at the whole world". That's over. Too bad we don't have any classes together this year. We just see each other at break, lunch, after school and all Menard's 'great' football games. (The ones we win all the time) I'm writin this in Williams English class. She's telling us what our averages are. Mine's probly an 'F'. I just made a '64' on my Biology test too. All I can think about is you-know-who. Lets talk about all the times you've had all those boyfriends and crushes too. We'd talk about each others problems. Like every time I got a horrible crush on somebody. Remember all those great cheerleader practices, each of us hoping we'd win. But look what happened Are ya gonna try again? I probly will. I don't know why, yust for the fun of it. We know more people and and it won't be as scary as it was last year. You wouldn't believe how sick in my stomach I was. I could have vomited all over the place. If I lose 5 lbs and my hair looks any better I will try out. Merle said 'HELLO'. Well guess that's all I can think of for now. I hope we are friends for a long time. Stay sweet and cute as you are.

Kathy Young

Francis,

For a girl that has had a strange experience with my cousin and a lot of other people. That is good as long as it doesn't go all that far.

I didn't know you too good Last year but any way. Don't forget French Class, Especially don't forget the French Lessons, that we have all had.
